

Abstract

A shim coil for use in magnetic resonance imaging spectroscopy (MRIS) is formed cutting or punching in a sheet of electrically conductive material the required coil pattern. The pattern can be punched using a CNC punch or stamping machine.